“Today’s lawyers are confronted with transnational dimensions appearing in nearly all legal issues. As a result, businesses expect lawyers to not only have solid knowledge of a domestic legal system but also the skills to understand and efficiently handle the manifold transnational issues connected to it in our globalized economy.

This is precisely what the LL.M. program ‘International Business Law’ organized by Danube University Krems, Austria and the SIBE Law School of Steinbeis University, Germany offers. The program is directed towards students and practitioners from all around the world, is held online and fully compatible with your practice-oriented job, and meets your specific professional interests.”
